MARCH'S GENERAL MEETING: Beautifying Columbia

Thanks Lisa & Dan!

At our last meeting, 25 Master Gardener members were provided a unique opportunity to look behind the scenes. Lisa Phillips and Dan Gibbons gave a tour of the city of Columbia's greenhouses. While Lisa is a business major, her abilities to grow beautiful plants were evident. A crew of eight begins planting approximately 16,000 annuals about 14 weeks before their target planting date of May 1. The plantings are then distributed to about 70 areas around the city.

A greenhouse was recently constructed to help provide growing room for the flats of plants, and another room housed racks of plants grown under ordinary fluorescent fixtures. While the greenhouse has given a nice growing space for plants, Lisa said that they struggle with the frequent cloudy days.

A free sack of seeds of a favorite plant, pink Champagne grass, was passed around our group. The plant graces city flower beds, blooming mid-summer through fall.

Lisa's favorite seed company, seen at ivygarth.com sells only to commercial growers, but in a polite reply from them, it was suggested we order Ivy Garth seeds from hazzardsgreenhouse.com, or seedman.com

Rothenberger/Wilson Endowment Fund

The Ray Rothenberger and Jim Wilson Missouri Master Gardener Endowment was launched March 3rd at a lunch honoring the two men in Columbia. The permanent endowment was created to fund the almost entirely volunteer statewide program that trains gardeners to become experts and volunteers in their communities.

Rothenberger retired in 1998 as chair of the MU horticulture department and served for 30 years as a home horticulture specialist. He was a key organizer of the first Missouri Master Gardener program in 1984 and helped lead it for many years.

Wilson served as a co-host of PBS "Victory Garden" program from Callaway Gardens for 10 years. He holds the title of honorary Master Gardener in nine states, including Missouri.

Charles Stowell, a Missouri Master Gardener state advisory board member, of Blue Springs, MO., proposed creating the fund to give donors a place to invest their money that would directly benefit the Master Gardener program.

The fund can accommodate big and small donations alike, said Mary Kroening, MU Extension associate and state coordinator for the Missouri Master Gardener program. She said the annual operating budget of about $15,000 comes from training fees paid by the volunteers. The endowment will help fund more advanced volunteer training, workshops and the state Master Gardener conference. About $3,500 has been committed so far, mostly from regional Master Gardener programs.

To donate to the Ray Rothenberger and Jim Wilson Missouri Master Gardener Endowment, contact Mary Kroening at (573) 882-9633.

Chapter News: Everything's Coming up Roses...

Bradford Research and Extension Center will host a "Carefree Rose Workshop," Thursday, April 27, from 5:30 to 9:00 pm. The workshop will be free and held at the Bradford Research and Extension Center, east of Columbia off WW and Rangeline Road.

The workshop begins with a half hour tour of rose plots to observe and discuss winter survival of Buck, David Austin, Hybrid Tea and other roses. Then, from 6:15 to 7:00, Jeff Oberhaus of Vintage Hill Farm will conduct a classroom presentation on roses suited for Missouri growing conditions. From 7-7:45, Mary Kroening, MU Horticulture Specialist and MG Coordinator for Missouri, will present "Care of Roses in Missouri's Wild Weather Extremes." The workshop wraps with rose management at Chance Gardens, with Steve Lee of Chance Gardens, Centralia.

This is an exciting opportunity for veteran rose growers or those who are just beginning the adventure of growing roses in Missouri.

An Interview with Don Day: by Denise Gebhardt

DG: How long have you been involved with MG?

DD: Since the early 1990's. I have been actively involved since about 1995. I helped with coordination in the early years and since about 2000 I have been teaching some of the classes.

DG: What can you identify as the best aspect of MG program?

DD: I think the best aspect of the program is watching the wide variety of dedicated volunteers we have that work on so many diverse projects. The enthusiasm of the group is contagious.

DG: Can you think of problems that have the potential to derail the MG program?

DD: We always have the budget problems. We are in good shape here on support. I get concerned when I hear about legislators that question why we are working on this program. I think we need to work more at describing the many benefits of the program and how it makes a difference in people's lives.

DG: What inspires you to continue your dedication to MG?

DD: The volunteers are what inspire me. I am amazed that so many people will volunteer so many hours to help others in their communities. The enthusiasm of Master Gardeners is contagious.

DG: What can MG do to help you expand/improve and strengthen the MG program?

DD: We need to improve on the participation level and I think that is happening. We probably need to look closer at evaluation of our activities especially to describe the difference the program makes in people's lives. We continue to expand on the volunteer opportunities and we continue to increase the numbers. You folks do make the program what it is.

DG: What changes do you hope to see in the next five years?

DD: I hope to see many more people involved in the program and would like to see our programs expand and deliver more educational programs to people in our community. I would especially like to see the youth gardening programs expand along with some enabling gardening programs.

DG: What aspect of the MG program proves difficult for you?

DD: My most difficult task is harassing people to turn in their hours.

DG: Which degrees do you hold, and what do you do when not working with MG?

DD: I have a BS and MS in Agricultural economics from the University of Missouri. My emphasis was in Farm Management. In my time not working with Master Gardeners, I work with farmers in the fourteen county Central Missouri region on Ag Engineering related topics. These include such things as farm buildings, grain drying and handling, livestock housing and handling, farm safety, energy conservation and many other topics.

DG: How many children do you have, how many years have you been married?

DD: My wife, Fran, and I have three children. They all live in Columbia. We also have two grandchildren (I am sure most of you know that). We feel really fortunate to have all of our children close and especially enjoy having our grandchildren close. Fran and I were married on August 2, 1969. Fran's Dad and my Granddad were both ministers and both participated in the ceremony at Arrow Rock Federated Church.

DG: Hobbies?

DD: I enjoy gardening, photography, reading, and doing things with our grandchildren. We are active members of Broadway Christian Church. Fran and I have both been elders and I co-teach an adult Sunday school class. Fran and I exercise regularly (well, almost regularly) at Health Connection.

DG: What would you like MG to know about you?

DD: After answering all these questions, you probably know more about me than you want to. I started working for University of Missouri Extension in 1967. This year will be my 39th year. I have seen a lot of change in our programming. The thing that doesn't change is the wonderful people we get to work with. I have worked with people in every county in this region. Some of them I have worked with for over 35 years. I enjoy seeing them implement the things we discuss and seeing the difference our programs make in their lives.

DG: And finally, what was your funniest moment in MG?

DD: There are a lot of these. At the meeting Tuesday, I mentioned that Sue Popper got me into another project and I really didn't feel I was qualified for it. She said, "Well, you just have to work with what you have." I think her performance at the graduation last fall was probably the funniest though. I really got so tickled I couldn't talk that night.
