Be an Effective County Extension Council Member

An effective county Extension council member is informed, involved and committed to the mission of University of Missouri Extension and to the goals of the county council. This module will help council members:

- Identify characteristics of an effective Extension council member;
- Understand their responsibilities and opportunities as council member;
- Identify information needs and available resources.

University of Missouri Extension Mission

The mission of University of Missouri Extension is to:

Improve Missourians’ lives by addressing their highest priorities through the application of research-based knowledge and resources.

As an integral part of the land-grant mission, University of Missouri Extension is a joint venture of the University of Missouri campuses; Lincoln University Cooperative Extension; the people of Missouri through county Extension councils; the Cooperative State Research, Education and Extension Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture; and other stakeholders and partners.

Characteristics of an Effective Extension Council Member

Each county council member brings a collection of skills, resources and knowledge that is valuable in carrying out elected or appointed responsibilities. Common among all effective county council members are:

- Vision for the future and understanding of the long-term effects of decisions that further community goals.
- Knowledge of the county, including awareness of its assets, its people and their educational needs.
- Open-mindedness to carefully weigh the pros and cons of an issue before reaching a decision.
- Self-assurance in decision-making, not influenced by strong or vocal factions.
- Enthusiasm for the goals of the organization and the ability to communicate that interest and passion to others.
Council Member Responsibilities/Opportunities
Council members are responsible for:

- Educational Program Development and Implementation — Council members assist in planning and carrying out Extension programs in their county by identifying concerns in their community; making recommendations to the University; and ensuring access to residents, groups and organizations in the county.

- Governance — Council members administer local extension budgets and operations, including council-employed personnel and office operations; they are responsible for council elections, meetings and operations.

- Membership — Council members represent the diversity of the county’s changing population.

Seven Steps to Becoming an Effective Council Member
The following suggestions can help you become an effective council member with the vision, knowledge, open-mindedness, self-assurance and enthusiasm to ensure that the educational goals of your community are met.

1. Know your responsibilities and how the Extension council operates. Be knowledgeable about state statutes governing county Extension councils (see the Extension Council Manual M-61 and your council’s bylaws).

2. Talk to people in your county to learn what others consider the important educational needs and issues in the county. When program priorities are being set, be prepared to introduce their ideas with suggestions for an appropriate course of action.

3. Be a source of information about University of Missouri Extension. Let others know about educational programs at every opportunity. Share with stakeholders the ways that Extension programs improve people’s lives.

4. Get to know faculty and staff. Regional Extension specialists assigned to your county are responsible for carrying out day-to-day responsibilities for educational programs. Ask them about those programs. Faculty welcomes the opportunity to discuss current and future programs with you. They work with a statewide Extension network to deliver programs. Obtain a list of Extension employees who deliver programs in your county, and review their areas of expertise.

5. Understand the issues. Be informed on the issues and prepared to make decisions at council meetings. Your unique perspective is always welcome.
6. Participate in council and committee meetings. As an elected or appointed representative of people in your community, your participation in decision making is essential to ensure that their educational needs are met.

7. Explore resources to help you do your best. Following is a brief description of some council resources and where to find them.

Be an Effective Council

An effective council is one in which members are engaged and involved. As a whole, effective councils engage in practices to ensure that the educational programs address community needs and that the council itself and the local operations it governs are efficient. Following are some characteristics of effective councils as they relate to the three council functions:

Educational Program Development and Implementation

An effective council:

- Understands its role: provides advice and counsel to the county program director concerning the Extension program in accordance with state statutes;
- Is open to new ideas and opportunities;
- Has a sense of priorities and timing.

Governance

An effective council:

- Understands state statutes governing county Extension councils;
- Has a clear, written statement of its purposes in alignment with state statutes and understands those purposes as a result of discussion;
- Establishes and follows council bylaws;
- Conducts meetings according to parliamentary procedure;
- Believes in, respects and practices democratic values;
- Has a responsible leader who guides the council in its deliberations;
- Keeps a written agenda, minutes of meetings and other necessary records;
- Evaluates its work regularly and prepares an annual report.

Membership

An effective council:

- Follows state statutes regarding membership and elections;
- Has elected and appointed members who are qualified and genuinely interested in serving;
- Works as a team rather than as individuals;
• Has members who participate actively in deliberations and discussions;
• Provides an enjoyable and productive experience for its members;
• Reflects the diversity of the citizens of the county;
• Participates in regional and statewide council development activities;
• Celebrates accomplishments;
• Creates a positive environment for Extension in the county.
