

EXTENSION DECISION TREE

December 2014

Addressing Dilemmas for Volunteer Development Work

Step 2: Filter/Analyze the Issue using Categories of Dilemmas*

Step 3: Filter/Analyze the Issue using your State's Principles of Practice** Example below from Wisconsin 4-H Youth Development Principles of Practice***

- Programs at all levels are conducted under the authority of Cooperative Extension and the United States Department of Agriculture
- Programs must comply with University and National 4-H policies, and state and federal law.
- The principle outcome is positive youth development.
- Programs are public.
- Programs respect and encourage youth voice.
- Programs and groups are inclusive.
- Serving as a 4-H Youth Development volunteer is a privilege, not a right.
- Programs for youth are delivered primarily through volunteers.
- Programs are non-formal, primarily offered during out-of-school time.
- Local decision making is important and preferred.

Adapted from Larson & Walker, 2007, and Hutchins 2008

**Adapted from Hutchins, 2008

***Guiding Philosophy for 4-H Youth Development Professionals, Greg Hutchins, 2008

Step 4: Resolution Planning

Restate the issue:

Identify Your Role:
 Educator
 Advisor
 Link to the University
 Mission Guardian

Do I need help or support from my Region Liaison? Department Head? Regional Director? Mentor? Program Director?

Logistics of Resolution Session:
Location and Room Set up
Identify who will be present
Is an agenda needed?
Does the meeting need ground rules?

Planning Box:

Are there documents I need to collect or review?
What will I say?
How will I communicate my role?
What are possible consequences?

Determine Follow-up Plan and Timeline

Step 5: Follow Up

Staff Person documents resolution process

Implement follow-up plan

