Sherry reports: Wow! What a great 2011 Prairie Day! The weather turned out beautiful and a record number of visitors came to the George Washington Carver National Monument on Saturday, September 10, 2011.

There was an estimated 1900 visitors who helped us celebrate late 1900-century life on the prairie. Our display of edible, medicinal, and ornamental native plants was a big hit with old and young alike. We gave away lots of pamphlets and we encouraged people to check out our website.

Thank you to the people who helped make Prairie Day a success - Pam, Debbie, Gwen, Lee, and Sue.
