Agriculture and Natural Resources helped 12,000 farmers and landowners in the 2012 historic drought apply for water-supply cost-shares that saved livestock and crops and helped keep consumer food prices low.

Over two years, Business Development generated $2.5 billion in economic impact and helped clients increase sales by $986 million, gain $657 million in government contracts, and create or retain 32,961 jobs.

MU Extension is the University of Missouri’s higher education classroom for more than 1 million rural and urban citizens in Missouri’s 114 counties and the City of St Louis.

Nursing Outreach enhanced the competency of 2,694 health care providers to provide high-quality, safe and effective care to Missouri citizens.
6-H Center for Youth Development reaches 282,000 youths, ages 5 to 18. 4-H’ers are 70 percent more likely to go to college than non-4-H peers, increasing their lifetime earnings by more than $2.01 million each.

Community Development helped communities acquire $10.8 million in grants and other resources and helped create 43 new nonprofit organizations.

A Partnership with the City of St. Louis and city neighborhoods provided a way for low-income residents in a “food desert” to access healthy produce through the St. Louis Healthy Corner Store Project.

Engineering Continuing Education student interns show industries how to reduce energy use, cut waste and conserve water. Since 2008, companies have saved more than $1 million.

County Extension Council members in every county serve as liaisons between citizens’ needs and MU Extension’s program capability. More than 2,000 elected and appointed Missourians serve on county councils.

The Fire and Rescue Training Institute annually trains more than 17,000 fire and emergency service personnel, preparing them to save property and lives.

The Fire and Rescue Training Institute annually trains more than 17,000 fire and emergency service personnel, preparing them to save property and lives.

County Extension Council members in every county serve as liaisons between citizens’ needs and MU Extension’s program capability. More than 2,000 elected and appointed Missourians serve on county councils.

The Fire and Rescue Training Institute annually trains more than 17,000 fire and emergency service personnel, preparing them to save property and lives.