

Ms. Lynn Squires earned undergrad and graduate degrees from Howard University with majors in Psychology, Student Development in Higher Education, and Organizational Communication with a research emphasis in African American Leadership Development. As an educator, her teaching experience ranges from preschool to graduate school, which underscores her belief in lifelong learning. She is an Allocations Panel Member with the United Way of Greater St. Louis and serves on the Executive Committee of the Howard University Alumni Association St. Louis Constituent Unit.

Since 2009, Lynn has served as the President of the Board of Directors for the St. Charles Lwanga Center. The center, which promotes Christian spiritual formation and leadership development within the African American Community, has responsibility of Black Catholic Ministry for the Archdiocese of St. Louis. In addition, Lynn is also on the first Precinct Board of Directors for the Louis County Citizen Police Academy Alumni Association.

Lynn is an active member of her church, St. Augustine Catholic Church. She is a lector, sings in the choir, helps with plant maintenance for the parish, and has served several terms on the Parish Council. Following her grandmother's example, she strives to share her talents and see Christ in everyone.
