

Tracey Howe-Koch is a resident of North St. Louis County where she lives with her husband, Matt and three teenage children. She has been very active in the greater St. Louis community, especially in advancing green energy and greater environmentalism. She has a Masters in Sustainability from St. Louis University. Currently, she volunteers as Coordinator for Missouri Interfaith Power & Light and works part-time as the Facilities Assistant for the St. Louis Symphony. In her spare time, she loves to sew, bake, and work in the garden. Additionally, she plays the clarinet with the Northwinds Concert Band and the quintet group, “No Strings Attached.”
