

Growers Obtain Access to University of Missouri Statewide Agronomy Resources

Do you want to know what current pests are attacking crops? Current status of row crops and any problems showing? Agronomic questions being received across the state and northwest Missouri? Growers are invited to participate in weekly Zoom meetings on cattle and forage production on Thursdays from 12-1 p.m., and on row crop production on Friday mornings from 7-8 a.m. You will be able to listen to the latest crop issues and hear questions and answers from University of Missouri State Extension Specialists and Field Specialists in Agronomy. You will also have the ability to personally ask questions through the chat area on Zoom. These free meetings are in response to COVID-19.

To register, go to <https://ipm.missouri.edu/townHalls/> and enter your name, county, email and question. Once registered, you do not have to re-register. You will receive a link to Zoom and this will remain the same link throughout the summer.

For more information, please contact Andy Luke at 660-425-6434, or Wayne Flanary at 816-279-1691, Field Specialists in Agronomy, University of Missouri Extension.