FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Who is eligible for the Missouri Land Grants?

The Land Grant awards are awarded to Missouri residents, only. A Missouri resident is someone classified as a Missouri resident for tuition purposes at the time of initial application to the University of Missouri. Students who become residents for the purposes of paying in-state tuition are not eligible to receive the Land Grant awards. Transfer students, who are residents, are eligible. MU considers transfer students the same way it considers continuing students; if a transfer student meets the renewal criteria, they will be eligible for the Missouri Land Grant.

What does it mean to be Pell eligible? How much money can my family make?

There is more than just looking at how much a family makes to determine Pell Grant eligibility. Each family's financial situation is different, and there's no one income cutoff that makes a student eligible or ineligible to receive the Pell. Students must submit the FAFSA to Mizzou by Feb. 1.

If I receive other Mizzou scholarships, will they affect my eligibility for the Missouri Land Grants?

The Missouri Land Grants are a commitment from Mizzou to fund tuition and fees through a variety of resources, including institutional awards. If students receive additional aid after the Missouri Land Grant is awarded, tuition and fees will still be covered, but the amount of the Missouri Land Grant may be reduced.

If I receive a scholarship from outside Mizzou, will my Missouri Land Grant be reduced?

Typically, outside scholarships do not affect a student's Missouri Land Grant. However, financial aid packages cannot exceed the estimated cost of attendance.

How do you determine if someone is eligible for the Honors award?

Individuals who are admitted to the MU Honors College and demonstrate eligibility for the Pell Grant may receive Missouri Land Grant Honors. Admission to MU's Honors College is selective. For information regarding the Honors College admission criteria, please visit honors.missouri.edu.

What are the specific requirements for the Honors award?

Those who receive the Missouri Land Grant Honors must maintain active enrollment in the Honors College for every semester that they receive the award. Students must keep a 3.5 GPA or higher, be enrolled in at least one Honors class a semester, participate in a mandatory MLGH information session, and meet with an Honors advisor at least once a semester. Furthermore, recipients must live in university-owned housing for each semester that they receive the award.
